

September, 2009

To Whom It May Concern:

It is my privilege to draw your attention to Jacques A. Weber.

I work with professional educators from all backgrounds through the Curriculum and Instruction Department at the University of Houston – Main Campus. The adult learners who register for courses I teach are generally working toward a Master of Education degree. I had the opportunity to work with Jacques Weber when he was a student in my section of CUIN 6360: Principles of Curriculum Development.

Jacques has deep commitment to the educational process and to student learning. He possesses a contagious enthusiasm for the study of languages and his personal skill with languages is outstanding. He demonstrates those characteristics of lifelong learners; he remains current with his studies of pedagogy and field practice in instructional and curricular research and he seeks out opportunities to advance his educational experiences.

Jacques Weber exhibits a strong work ethic, intrinsic motivation, and effective personal and communication skills. His leadership skills are well-developed and he is a welcome addition to any working team.

Sincerely,

Dr. Sandra Olson
solson@uh.edu